Art at the Met Office

14 May 2004

Chief Executive Peter Ewins will officially open the exhibition of art at the Met Office headquarters in Exeter on Monday 17 May at midday.

As part of the recent relocation to Exeter, the Met Office invited artists to play a role in developing an innovative and stimulating working environment in the new building. Their work aims to reflect, promote and debate the activities of the Met Office by exploring the relationship between art and science.

The exhibition also forms part of the Exeter Festival and is open during the evenings of 5, 7 and 9 July 2004.

- Admission will be by ticket only
- Tickets can be obtained on the Met Office web site from 24 May
- Numbers are restricted to 200 per evening
